Black History Committee Welcomes National Museum of African American History & Culture's John Franklin to Thomas Balch Library

On Sunday October 21, 2018 at 2 p.m., John W. Franklin, the distinguished cultural historian and head of external affairs at the Smithsonian National Museum of African American History and Culture (NMAAHC), will discuss the museum's and libraries' roles in researching African American genealogy. Franklin brings his personal experience to the subject, including stories of how his father, world-renowned historian John Hope Franklin, overcame obstacles in conducting research in segregated libraries.

Franklin received his bachelor's degree in anthropology from Stanford University with a focus on French-speaking West African and Caribbean societies. He later did graduate work at Johns Hopkins School of Advanced International Studies on African development issues. Prior to joining the National Museum of African American History and Culture, he served as a program manager and curator with the Smithsonian Center for Folklife and Cultural Heritage where his responsibilities included curating the annual Smithsonian Folklife Festival's programming.

As a program specialist in the Smithsonian Office of Interdisciplinary Studies, he organized numerous conferences, including Black Francophone Presence in the U.S., African Americans and the Evolution of the Living Constitution, African Immigration, West Africa Research and Human Rights, and Scientific Progress and Cultural Diversity.

Did you know these Loudoun artifacts are on display at the NMAAHC?

The flowered skirt, far left, belonged to Lucy Lee Shirley, born enslaved in Leesburg, Virginia, in 1854. On the left is the hand-made tin carrying box with the freedom papers of Joseph Trammell of Loudoun County. It was a gift of the late Elaine E. Thompson, a Trammell descendant and BHC founding member. Both are displayed in the museum's "Slavery and Freedom" exhibition.

In 2016 Thomas Balch Library received the correspondence of Dr. Armistead Randolph Mott, his wife, Virginia Bentley Mott, and their friends and family.

Comprising more than 500 letters dating from 1840 to 1900, this correspondence includes detailed descriptions of life in Loudoun County prior to, during, and after the Civil War. The Motts lived at Rokeby, and their network of correspondents extended throughout Loudoun County into all parts of Virginia and neighboring states.

The library received a grant of $5,000 from Loudoun Library Foundation to assist with the processing of this collection.

- In April we hosted our annual Volunteer Recognition Luncheon. This is always a wonderful opportunity for staff and volunteers to mingle and share information.
- Four of our part-time staff obtained full-time positions. Barbara Hughes accepted a position in Fairfax; Christy Toms accepted a position as digital archivist at the Stark Center, University of Texas–Austin; Keelia McCaffrey is now a youth librarian in Ohio, and Travis Shaw is now public programs coordinator at Mosby Heritage Area. While both Christy and Keelia have moved out of the area, Travis will still be with us on Tuesday evenings. Mary Frye, retired executive associate for former town manager John Wells, has joined us as office manager.
- Thomas Balch Library hosted the Virginia caucus meeting of the Mid Atlantic Regional Archives Conference in June. This event drew 40 archivists from across Virginia and southern Maryland who enjoyed hearing updates from regional archives, a tour of the library, and the Charles A. Johnston Collection walking tour of downtown Leesburg.
- Following a relatively mild winter, we were hit with a late winter storm in March. Our spring seminar had to be postponed. Rescheduled in May, the seminar Genetic Genealogy: Understanding DNA Results with Shannon Combs-Bennett drew an enthusiastic crowd. We are planning on future seminars and anticipate they will be held in May to accommodate Mother Nature.

As we enter our busy fall season, I look forward to welcoming you when visiting Thomas Balch Library and exhibits or attending our programs.

Ending Slavery, Changing Lives

Polly McLean Remembers Lucile Jones

Sunday, September 23, 2018 at 2PM

Lucile Berkeley Buchanan Jones, born to freed slaves from the Oatlands plantation in Loudoun County, became the first African American woman to graduate from the University of Colorado when she received a bachelor's degree in 1918. Remembering Lucile depicts the rise of the African American middle class through the historical journey of Lucile and her family from slavery in northern Virginia to life in the West.

Polly E. Bugros McLean

An associate professor in the Department of Ethnic Studies at the University of Colorado, Boulder, Polly E. Bugros McLean received a master's degree from Columbia University and a PhD from the University of Texas, Austin. She has been a visiting professor at the University of Zambia and Howard University, as well as a Fulbright Scholar at the University of Namibia.

The Civil War Through the Eyes of a Privileged White Southern Teen

Sunday, December 2, 2018 at 2PM

The War Outside My Window, edited by Janet Elizabeth Croon, captures the spirit and character of a privileged white teenager who witnessed the dissolution of slavery in America and the end of the reign of white slaveholders.

LeRoy Wiley Gresham was born in 1847 to an affluent slaveholding family in Macon, Georgia. As a child he suffered a horrific leg injury that left him an invalid. Educated, inquisitive, and exceptionally witty, the 12-year-old began keeping a diary in 1860 just as secession and civil war began tearing the country and his world apart.

He wrote daily for five years, putting pen to paper with a vim and tongue-in-cheek vigor that continues to impress more than 150 years later. His practical, philosophical, and occasionally Twain-like observations cover politics, the war, family pets, and a wide variety of hobbies. His writing sheds light on life for a member of a socially prominent and wealthy family in Macon, an important manufacturing center for the South. Gresham's own slow and painful death mirrored that of the demise of the Confederacy.

Janet E. Croon recently retired from teaching advanced high school history in Fairfax County, Virginia. She holds a bachelor's degree in political science, modern European history, and Russian language from the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign and a master's degree in international studies from the University of Dayton. She taught international baccalaureate history for two decades and developed a deep interest in the Civil War by living in Virginia.

Friends Gather at Murray Hill on the Potomac for Annual Event

Just in time for the Friends of Thomas Balch Library's annual event

on September 16, 2018, the sun broke through cloudy skies, giving lucky guests a delightful afternoon at the historic Murray Hill estate of hosts Peggy and John Rust. Overlooking the Potomac River, the 18th century-style home built by the owner's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Stirling Murray Rust, provided a beautiful backdrop for the occasion featuring delicious food from Savoir Fare and compelling food for thought from historian Richard T. Gillespie. He shared stories of the early days of the Civil War at this strategic location on the Virginia—Confederate—side of the Potomac just a stone's throw from the shore of Maryland—the United States of America.

Chairman of several companies and an advisor to heads of major corporations and governments, he was principal author of "shock and awe," a graduate of the U.S. Naval Academy, he skippered a swift boat in Vietnam and a destroyer in the Persian Gulf. He holds an MA, M.A.D., and PhD from The Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy at Tufts University. He lives in Washington, D.C.

All categories explore 1) why congruence of national culture, geography, and scientific-industrial capacity is essential for successful military action; 2) how strategy and geopolitics matterably trump ideology; 3) how building the integration of capabilities across service lines happen when they are ruthlessly imposed top down; 4) unity of command, unity of effort, and imagination; and 5) how building effective military power takes time, resources, and history.
